Young Ambassador Program

Introduction to YAP

The Young Ambassador Program (YAP) aims to foster a sense of friendship and to educate and train highly talented young students from China, Japan and Korea. The YAP traditionally comprises lectures related to Trilateral Cooperation and East Asian affairs, in-depth dialogues among the participants, site visits to relevant organizations and a cultural tour. Since 2013, the YAP has fostered a group of CJK Young Leaders active in diplomacy, business and academia sectors.

At the 6th Trilateral Summit, the three leaders recognized the YAP and endorsed its continuation.

We will continue exchange programs for government officials and journalists, the “Young Ambassador Program”, the “Network of Trilateral Cooperation Think-tanks”, and the trilateral cooperation among the diplomatic training institutions to enhance understanding and trust with regard to trilateral cooperation.

- Paragraph 48 of the Joint Declaration for Peace and Cooperation in Northeast Asia

This year's YAP resuming its first offline format since the outbreak of COVID-19, is part of TCS' Trilateral Youth Month themed “Reconnect, Reimmerse, Rediscover,” and will focus on the mutual public perception issues among Chinese, Japanese and Korean especially youth. The program will walk the participants into the issues, and encourage participants to tap their own potentials for creative and innovation solutions for TCS.

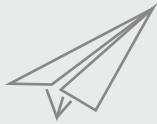

Eligibility

- Aged below 30
- Currently enrolled undergraduate and graduate students of Chinese, Japanese and Korean nationalities
- Fluent in English. Additional CJK language proficiency is preferred
- Strong interests in and understanding on East Asian studies and Trilateral Cooperation among China, Japan and Korea
